MEMORANDUM FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON S. S. E.

SUBJECT: Organizational Concepts.

1. I consider that the organizational concept of the national psychological warfare organization along military lines is absolutely sound. The Director should be provided with a general staff corresponding to and charged with the following major functions:

- a. Personnel and administration
- b. Intelligence
- c. Operations and training
- d. Services, supplies, and logistics

2. A separate inspection department, including security functions, should be provided to operate directly under the control of the Director of the organization. The military concept of a general staff has met with enthusiastic favor and acceptance during wartime. The organization under consideration is essentially a wartime organization and the general staff concept will fit adequately into the plan. The great majority of the transactions of the organization will undoubtedly be with the military services. Conversely, the National Military Establishment will have a predominant interest in the wartime activities of the psychological warfare organization. Consistent with this relationship, I am proposing an organization along general staff lines as follows:

Headed the entire organization is a Director, with his Deputy and two Deputy Directors for domestic and overseas operations (or, if preferable, for civilian and military operations). Immediately subordinate to the Director and his Deputies is an Administrative Office, headed by an Executive Officer. It should be understood that this office is in no sense a command office or a policy making office; it is purely an administrative function operated for the Director by his Executive. This officer keeps the necessary records and files, hires and fires the clerical assistants, sees that office regulations are promulgated, etc.

SECRET

Next in the organization structure is the general staff level consisting of the personnel and administration head, the intelligence head, the operations and training head and the services, supply and logistics head. These four Heads, or Assistant Directors, or Assistant Chiefs of Staff -- whatever the Planners care to call them -- are responsible, each in his own field, for all the activities that are grouped under him. For example, legal counsel is a function of administration. The Legal Adviser can well report to P-1, Personnel and Administration. Similarly, training of leaflet writers is a training function under P-3, Operations and Training. Securing an adequate amount of news print is a supply function, as is the distribution of it. These activities can and should well be under Service, Supply and Preparation. The number and type of persons needed to man the organization is a function of Personnel. Communications problems could conveniently be handled under Administration. Special offices for inter-departmental coordination, or inter-office coordination and compliance, or any other related functions as far as administrative finesse are not deemed essential in an organization of the type visualized. Coordination, office planning, etc., are inherently basic functions of any capable staff. Each of the Heads of the major divisions, P-1, P-2, P-3, and P-4, should properly be qualified to run his office in close coordination and collaboration with, not only other offices under the Director, but also such external agencies as might be necessary. One is tempted to conclude that if the Director finds it necessary to have an executive for inter-departmental coordination, he should also find it necessary to dismiss all other Department Heads. I cannot conceive of, for example, a legal counsel who would advise the Director concerning important problems without first consulting the Army Judge Advocate, Navy Judge Advocate, Air Force Judge Advocate, and, possibly, the Attorney General and the FBI. I believe we can safely conclude that any individuals selected for these jobs will have the fundamental principles of proper staff procedure thoroughly engrained in them. Any assumption that we can make concerning the abilities of these persons must include the fact that they will be men of wide staff experience.

The psychological warfare organization in its lower levels may be made up of operating specialists, but the top structure must be composed of well grounded and thoroughly trained staff heads, capable of coordinating the activities of a large organization with the associated activities of other equally large organizations. To assume that these staff heads must ^{UNDER} be an "Executive" to insure discharge of their primary functions is to disavow the efficacy of the staff system and to place a low level limit on the ability of these staff officers. They must and they will coordinate their staff activities.

Specialized functions, e.g., recruiting, purchasing, contracts, newsprint, censorship, etc., may properly be organized as special staff sections, operating under the over-all guidance of one of these staff directors, assistant directors, or whatever they may be termed, but the general staff level and general staff responsibilities of the assistants to the Director of the organization should be preserved.

A PROVISIONAL NATIONAL PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE ORGANIZATIONMemorandum by U.S. Navy MemberPROBLEM

1. To outline a provisional national psychological warfare organization within the terms of reference of SWNCC 304/1; 304/2 and SWNCC 304/6 as approved.

FACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM

2. SWNCC 304/1 as amended by SWNCC 304/2 contains the Charter for the Subcommittee. This Charter charges the Subcommittee with the preparation of national plans and implementing directives for Psychological Warfare as well as plans for orderly and effective organizational transition from peacetime to wartime status.

3. At present there is no national organization or plans for such organization from which to initiate the transition from peacetime to wartime status as envisaged by the Charter.

CONCLUSIONS

4. A national organization for conducting psychological warfare should be provisionally outlined by the Subcommittee as a matter of first priority. Initially the organization should be outlined in a skeleton manner and submitted to SANACC for approval.

5. As facts become available and guidance is received from SANACC the skeleton organization should be amended accordingly.

6. The national organization should utilize to the fullest extent possible all agencies of the national government that can assist in accomplishing the mission of the psychological warfare organization. Such utilization at all times to be based on efficient operations and prevention of unnecessary duplication within the national government.

7. As policies are developed that will assist in the establishment of an efficient workable organization they should be submitted to SANACC for approval in order that solution of the problem may be expedited.

8. The decision as to whether the organization will be under the National Security Council or the reconstituted SWACC has been held in abeyance. It is assumed that all studies may consider an organization under the authority of the National Security Council in order that the work of the Subcommittee may proceed.

9. A rough outline of the Command relationships may be considered to be:-

NATIONAL SECURITY COUNCIL

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

NATIONAL PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE ORGANIZATION

Director:-

Director:-

Deputy for Domestic Relations
Deputy for Foreign Operations

RECOMMENDATIONS

10. It is recommended that the enclosure be accepted as a basis for discussion by the Subcommittee in order that a skeletonized national organization for conducting psychological warfare may be determined and submitted to the SANACC for approval by 1 April '48.

MAJOR SUBDIVISIONS OF A NATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE OPERATIONS

Memorandum by the Navy Member

THE PROBLEM

1. To determine the major subdivisions of a national organization for conducting psychological warfare under a national director responsible to the National Security Council.

FACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM

2. By informal action on 8 January 1948 the SANACC approved SWNCC 304/6 after amending. These documents contained information concerning establishment of a national psychological warfare organization.

3. Paragraph five of the Enclosure to SWNCC 304/6 reads:

"The (national psychological warfare) organization should be directed by a Director".

4. Appendix "A" to Progress Report No. 18 for meeting held on 18 February 1948 outlines tentatively the mission and duties of a director of a national psychological warfare organization. These duties were outlined with the assumption that the Director of such an organization would be subject to the authority of, and directly responsible to, the National Security Council.

5. One psychological warfare organization during World War II had the following subdivisions:

- a. Administrative
- b. Supply and Transport
- c. Media
- d. Plans and Directives
- e. Communications
- f. Finance
- g. Areas
- h. Intelligence
- i. Training

SECRET

This organization did not differentiate the staff functions from the specialized phases of operations that support directly the agency's broad mission.

CONCLUSIONS

6. Each subdivision under an assistant director should directly contribute to the fulfillment of the director's responsibilities. Each subdivision therefore should specialize in some phase of the agency's basic broad objective.

7. Collectively all subdivisions will perform the agency's basic functions.

8. The initial organization with operating subdivisions should provide for efficient decentralized administration; decentralized with respect to its own headquarters as well as the headquarters of the National Government.

9. A psychological warfare organization is primarily responsible for the dissemination of information; its functions are therefore best discharged through existing media of mass communications.

10. Mass communications media may be subdivided into four significant categories, viz., Speech, Writing, Pictures and Special. These media may be individually exploited under individual assistant directors in a decentralized administrative manner.

RECOMMENDATIONS

11. That the Subcommittee give consideration to the following major subdivisions for conducting psychological warfare operations under the national director:

- a. Division of Speech Media
- b. Division of Writing Media
- c. Division of Picture Media
- d. Division of Special Media (This subdivision is responsible for clandestine operations).

SSE 5

12. That each subdivision be supervised and administered by an assistant director, who is a specialist in the media for which he is responsible.

POLICY AND PLANNING BOARD

Memorandum by the Navy Member

THE PROBLEM

1. To determine the mission and duties of the Policy and Planning Board of a National Organization for psychological warfare.

FACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM

2. By informal action on 8 January 1948 the SANACC approved SWNCC 304/6 after amending.

3. Paragraph 5 of the Enclosure to SWNCC 304/6 reads:

"The organization should be directed by a Director"

"the Director:

CONCLUSIONS

4. In order to enable the Director to establish broad policy and make plans concerning psychological warfare the advice and assistance of the Policy and Planning Board should be obtained from the highest calibre officials practicable.

5. The membership of the Policy and Planning Board, with the Director, NSIA, as chairman, should consist of the following or their representatives:

- a. the Joint Chiefs of Staff
- b. Secretary of State
- c. Secretary of National Defense
- d. Secretary of Army
- e. Secretary of Navy
- f. Secretary of Air Force
- g. Director Central Intelligence Agency
- h. In addition, such additional members whom the President and National Security Council may designate.

6. The members of the Policy and Planning Board would attend meetings with as many advisers, technical advisers, experts and persons of similar status, consistent with security requirements, as may be required by each member.

RECOMMENDATION

7. It is recommended that the mission and duties of the Policy and Planning Board be:

3. SWNCC 304/1, as amended by SWNCC 304/2, contains the charter for the SANAC Subcommittee on Special Studies and Evaluations.
